

Vote for Europe.

Cooperation with the EU enables us to travel, work, study and live right across Europe. It also makes our corner of the world more peaceful and secure. Working together, we European nations represent a strong global force and a voice to be reckoned with.

This is why the Liberals say YES to Europe while others hesitate, complain or back out entirely. In actual fact, we want greater cooperation. Because it's only by working together that we can solve the really big issues of our time, such as the climate crisis, security, employment, fighting crime and our shared responsibility for the world's refugees.

Vote for the climate.

There's no time to lose – the EU must take the lead in the work done on climate change. We have to quickly introduce a European tax on carbon dioxide in order to reduce emissions and pave the way for new green technology.

Through joint decisions, we can also reduce the use of plastics, eradicate coal energy, make agriculture more environmentally friendly and use smarter, cleaner transport. A small but important part of this process is making it easier to book tickets and travel by train throughout Europe. Cooperation with the EU is the route to a green and climate smart Europe. A sustainable future we create together.

Vote against nationalists and extremists.

How do we envisage our common future? Pretty much every European nation now has its own clone of Donald Trump – nationalists and extremists spreading hate, lies and fear. If they get their way, we'll lose much of the freedom we've grown accustomed to. Borders are closing and cooperation coming to an end.

Yet right across Europe, there are many who see things differently. Liberals fly the flag for freedom, openness and a European future in which we meet challenges side by side.

Vote for change.

YES! Throughout Europe, it is liberals who are fighting the hardest for cooperation. And since we like the EU so much, we also have the most ideas on how to make it even better. Here are a selection:

- A European tax on carbon dioxide.
- A ban on non-recyclable plastic.
- Making it easier to book tickets and travel by train throughout Europe.
- Introducing the Euro as the currency in Sweden, which will benefit Swedish consumers as well as enterprise.
- All EU states to assume joint responsibility for the refugees who come to Europe.
- More pressure on member states that fail to comply with human rights requirements.
- Cooperation to counteract crime and terrorism.
- Joint border policing.
- A tougher stance on human trafficking.
- Greater insight and efficiency regarding the work of the EU.
